INTRODUCTION

This report gives historical data on labour force participation rates by sex, 1911-1961; by age and sex 1941-1961; and trend data for occupation divisions, 1911-1961, for Canada and the provinces.

In the 1961 and 1951 Censuses the labour force concept rather than the gainfully occupied concept of 1911-1941 was used. The chief difference between the two concepts is that the labour force approach measures employment characteristics at a given point in time, whereas the gainfully occupied definition is more concerned with a person's usual activity and is more difficult to apply. The labour force as defined in the 1961 Census includes all persons, 15 years of age and over, who were reported as having a job of any kind, either part-time or full-time (even if they were not at work) or were reported as looking for work, during the week prior to enumeration. In urban localities the major portion of the enumeration extended over the first two weeks in June, and in rural areas over the first three weeks.

The reference period in 1951 of the week ending June 2, 1951 is considered comparable to 1961 and the definition of the labour force was substantially the same except for the inclusion of 14-year olds who have been removed from these historical tables. Persons seeking their first job have been excluded from both the 1951 and 1961 labour force figures in this report as they are not included in the gainfully occupied concept used in censuses prior to 1951.

Other groups affected by the change in concept are persons whose principal activity was keeping house, attending school, retired or "none" (no occupation) but who did some work during the census period and therefore would be included under the labour force concept but excluded under the gainfully occupied concept. Also persons voluntarily idle during the census period but usually engaged in a gainful occupation would be excluded from the labour force but included in the gainfully occupied. The most important of these differences are those which may affect the comparability of the female labour force and of seasonal types of occupations.

Indians on reserves.—Indians living on reserves are excluded from the labour force in 1951 and from the gainfully occupied in 1921 but included in other census years except 1901 when all Indians were excluded. The comparability of certain occupation divisions, especially that of "Fishing, hunting and trapping" may be affected by this change.

Occupation inquiry.—In 1951 and 1961 persons in the labour force who had a job during the week prior to enumeration were asked to state the kind of work in which they were engaged in that period. Those with two or more jobs were asked to report the occupation at which they worked the greatest number of hours. Persons looking for work exclusive of those looking for their first job were asked to give the occupation followed when last employed. Prior to 1951 persons gainfully occupied were asked to report their occupation. Further, persons customarily following more than one occupation reported the occupation at which they were employed most of the year prior to the census date or at which they received the greater part of their earnings during that period. Under the gainfully occupied concept persons unemployed on the census date reported the occupation last followed.

Occupational classification.—Occupations for all census years other than 1951 have been arranged on the basis of the 1951 Classification though some adjustment of the 1951 grouping was necessary. The 1951 Classification used a different grouping system from the 1961 Classification being less homogeneous from an occupational point of view and with a more industrial flavour in the terminology. Over the years new occupational classes have been added to take account of new developments and others have been discontinued because they have become relatively less important. For this reason comparisons have been made, in Table 3, showing the occupational trends for the past 50 years, for broad occupation groups only into which data has been regrouped to provide satisfactory comparability. A special trend report will be issued in the intercensal period providing more detailed comparisons of 1941, 1951, and 1961 data using the 1961 Occupation Classification as a base.

Le présent rapport donne, pour le Canada et les provinces, des données chronologiques sur le taux d'activité de la main-d'œuvre par sexe de 1911 à 1961; par âge et sexe de 1941 à 1961; et des données sur les tendances quant aux divisions professionnelles de 1911 à 1961.

Aux recensements de 1961 et 1951, on a utilisé le concept de la main-d'œuvre plutôt que celui de la population active, utilisé de 1911 à 1941. La principale différence entre les deux concepts c'est que la définition de la main-d'œuvre détermine les caractéristiques de l'emploi à un point nommé dans le temps, tandis que celle de la population active porte plus particulièrement sur l'activité habituelle d'une personne et il est plus difficile d'application. La main-d'œuvre, telle que la définit le recensement de 1961, comprend toutes les personnes âgées de 15 ans et plus, inscrites comme ayant un emploi quelconque, à temps partiel ou de plein temps (même si elles n'étaient pas au travail), ou comme ayant cherché du travail la semaine précédant le recensement. Dans les localités urbaines, le dénombrement a été fait en majeure partie durant les deux premières semaines de juin, et, dans les régions rurales, durant les trois premières.

La période de référence de 1951 (semaine close le 2 juin 1951) est jugée comparable à 1961 et la définition de la main-d'œuvre demeure sensiblement la même sauf qu'elle embrasse les personnes âgées de 14 ans qui ont été retirées de ces tableaux chronologiques. Les personnes en quête de leur premier emploi ont été exclues des chiffres de la main-d'œuvre tant en 1951 qu'en 1961, dans le présent rapport, parce qu'elles ne tombent pas sous le concept de la population active employé lors des recensements antérieurs à 1951.

Les autres groupes sur lesquels influe la modification du concept comprennent les personnes dont l'activité principale est de tenir maison ou de fréquenter l'école, les personnes "retraitées" ou n'ayant déclaré "aucune" profession mais qui, durant la période du recensement, ont fait quelque travail, et par conséquent, seraient visées par le concept de la main-d'œuvre mais non celui de la population active. De même, toutes les personnes volontairement inactives durant la période du recensement mais qui, habituellement, occupent un emploi rémunéré seraient exclues de la main-d'œuvre mais incluses dans la population active. Les différences les plus importantes sont celles qui pourraient influencer sur la comparabilité de la main-d'œuvre féminine et des professions de nature saisonnière.

Les Indiens des réserves.—Les Indiens qui vivent dans des réserves sont exclus de la main-d'œuvre en 1951 et de la population active en 1921 mais inclus dans les autres recensements sauf celui de 1901, où tous les Indiens étaient exclus. Cette modification influera peut-être sur la comparabilité entre certaines divisions professionnelles, surtout celles de la "Pêche, chasse et trappage".

Question sur la profession.—En 1951 et 1961, les personnes qui faisaient partie de la main-d'œuvre et avaient un emploi la semaine précédant le dénombrement ont été priées de déclarer la nature de leur travail durant cette semaine. Les personnes qui avaient deux emplois ou plus déclaraient celui auquel elles avaient consacré le plus grand nombre d'heures. Les personnes cherchant du travail, sauf celles qui étaient en quête de leur premier emploi, devaient déclarer leur dernier emploi. Jusqu'à 1951, les personnes qui avaient un emploi rémunéré devaient déclarer leur profession. En outre, les personnes occupant habituellement plus d'un emploi devaient déclarer celui qu'elles avaient occupé durant la majeure partie de l'année antérieure à la date du recensement ou duquel elles avaient tiré la majeure partie de leur gain durant la période. En vertu du concept de la population active, les personnes inemployées à la date du recensement devaient déclarer leur dernier emploi.

Classement des professions.—Lors de toutes les années de recensement, sauf celle de 1951, les professions ont été disposées suivant le classement de 1951 bien qu'il ait fallu remanier dans une certaine mesure le groupement de 1951. Le système du groupement employé dans le classement de 1951 différait de celui du classement de 1961 en ce qu'il était moins homogène du point de vue professionnel et que la terminologie avait une teinte plutôt industrielle. Avec les années, de nouvelles classes de professions ont été ajoutées pour tenir compte des nouvelles situations et d'autres ont été abandonnées parce qu'elles ont perdu de leur importance relative. Pour cette raison, des comparaisons ont été établies, au tableau 3, qui donnent les tendances professionnelles des 50 dernières années, pour les grands groupes de professions seulement où les données ont été regroupées afin d'assurer une comparabilité satisfaisante. Un rapport spécial sur les tendances sera publié durant la période intercensale qui donnera des comparaisons plus détaillées entre les chiffres de 1941, 1951 et 1961, le classement des professions de 1961 servant de base.

Note: The "Gainfully occupied" rather than the "Labour force" concept was used prior to 1951 for determining the labour force status (see Introduction).

The labour force figures exclude a few persons seeking work who have never been employed.

³ Moins les personnes en service actif le 2 juin 1941.

Nota: Jusqu'à 1951, le concept de la "population active" plutôt que celui de la "main-d'oeuvre" servait à déterminer la situation dans la main-d'oeuvre (voir Introduction).

Les chiffres de la main-d'oeuvre ne comprennent pas quelques personnes en quête de travail qui n'ont jamais travaillé.

² Persons on Active Service are excluded from the 1941 gainfully occupied (labour force) figures.

³ Includes Newfoundland.

Note: The "Gainfully occupied" rather than the "Labour force" concept was used prior to 1951 for determining the labour force status (see Introduction).

The labour force figures exclude a few persons seeking work who have never been employed.

² Les chiffres de 1941 à l'égard de la population active (main-d'oeuvre) ne comprennent pas les personnes en service actif.

³ Comprend Terre-Neuve.

Nota: Jusqu'à 1951, le concept de la "population active" plutôt que celui de la "main-d'oeuvre" servait à déterminer la situation dans la main-d'oeuvre (voir Introduction).

Les chiffres de la main-d'oeuvre ne comprennent pas quelques personnes en quête de travail qui n'ont jamais travaillé.

TABLE 2. Number and percentage of the population, 15 years of age and over, in the labour force, by age group and sex, for Canada¹ and the provinces, 1941-1961 - Concluded

¹ Excludes Yukon and Northwest Territories; includes Newfoundland in 1951 and 1961. See 1961 occupational data on a 1951 base for Newfoundland in Table 3B of this report.

² Excludes persons on Active Service on June 2, 1941.

³ Includes proofreaders, shippers, weighmen and postmen classified elsewhere in other years.

⁴ Excludes Indians living on reserves (see Introduction).

⁵ Includes pulp mill employees.

⁶ Less than 0.005 per cent.

⁷ Includes almost all mine and smelter employees, except clerical workers.

⁸ Includes stationary enginemen and occupations associated with electric power production.

⁹ Includes "Communication".

¹⁰ Labourers in all industries except those engaged in agricultural, fishing, logging or mining operations are included in this division.

Note: The "Gainfully occupied" rather than the "Labour force" concept was used prior to 1951 for determining labour force status (see Introduction).

The labour force figures exclude a few persons seeking work who have never been employed.

Occupations for 1911, 1921, 1931, 1941 and 1961 were rearranged on the basis of the 1951 Classification though some adjustment of the 1951 grouping was necessary. For 1901 this cannot be done for the provinces. 1901 occupational group data on a 1951 base, for Canada, are shown in Table 3A of this report.

² Moins les personnes en service actif le 2 juin 1941.

³ Comprend les correcteurs d'épreuves, les expéditeurs, les peseurs et les facteurs classés ailleurs les autres années.

⁵ Comprend les employés des usines à pâte.

⁶ Moins de 0.005 pour 100.

⁷ Comprend à peu près tous les employés de mine et de smelter, sauf les employés de bureau.

⁸ Comprend les conducteurs de machines fixes et les professions associées à la production d'énergie électrique.

⁹ Comprend "Communications".

¹⁰ Les manoeuvres dans toutes les industries sont inclus dans cette division sauf ceux qui sont engagés dans des travaux relatifs à l'agriculture, à la pêche, à l'abattage du bois ou aux mines.

Nota: Jusqu'à 1951, le concept de la "population active" plutôt que celui de la "main-d'oeuvre" servait à déterminer la situation dans la main-d'oeuvre (voir Introduction).

Les chiffres de la main-d'oeuvre ne comprennent pas quelques personnes en quête de travail qui n'ont jamais travaillé.

Les professions de 1911, 1921, 1931, 1941 et 1961 ont été remaniées d'après la classification de 1951, bien qu'il ait fallu apporter certaines rectifications de groupement de 1951, ce qui n'a pas été possible pour les provinces en 1901. Les chiffres de 1901 par groupe professionnel, ramenés à la base de 1951, pour le Canada, sont contenus dans le tableau 3A du présent rapport.
